Arrangement:

During exigency at the place of installation, an alternate source of power from the existing DG set will feed the important loads in the building like lighting, power sockets, UPS, lifts, water pumps, drain pumps etc., directly by incorporating change over arrangements near these loads.

The power is drawn from existing 750 KVA DG set after by- passing the normal route of DG power though AMF panel and other LT panels kept in the basement and fed to an emergency panel (in the scope) to be installed close to the DG set. This newly proposed emergency panel will feed the different loads through change over switches (in the scope) to be installed close to the same.

This arrangement will completely avoid the normal power supply routing through transformers, 11 KV switch boards, and LT panels which will be kept de-energized during any exigency at the office.

Operation:

The emergency panel will get supply from the existing 750 KVA DG set installed in the ground and will feed the changeover switches to be installed near the loads in basement, ground floor and other floors; Cables (in the scope) is run for this purpose from emergency panel to the different change over switches

After energizing the emergency panel with DG power, the operator has to switch on the changeover switches kept near the different loads manually.

After the exigency returns to normal condition, these change over switches can be put back to the original position and run the loads in the normal way (EB or DG).
